

Eight Join State Hall of Fame

Eight Washington residents were inducted October 20 into the Washington State 4-H Hall of Fame at the 4-H Forum in Chelan. They were recognized for their commitment and impact on 4-H and their communities, and for leadership to 4-H over many years. The 2006 Hall of Fame Inductees were:

• Audrey Brannon, Woodinville, has been an active 4-H volunteer in Snohomish County for 30 years where her name is synonymous with 4-H poultry. She co-founded the Bear Creek Bunch 4-H Club in 1976. She served as county poultry program leader and later as Evergreen State Fair 4-H Poultry Superintendent. She received the Snohomish County Clover Award in 2005.

Audrey Brannon

Richard Bartram

• Richard Bartram, Wenatchee, a WSU Extension educator in Chelan, Douglas, and Okanogan counties from 1947 to 1981 helped establish a 4-H camp on Lost Lake in Okanogan and played a major role in establishing the Chelan County Fair. He and other extension staff and volunteers built some of the buildings at the fairgrounds.

• Cecelia Campbell, Twisp, started the first 4-H club in Twisp in 1952. She served as its leader for 24 years. She and her husband Orvan showed champion registered Hereford cattle. Many 4-H'ers learned fitting, showing, and livestock husbandry at the Campbells' ranch on Beaver Creek, where many 4-H events have been hosted.

Cecelia Campbell

Jody Hoffman

Dave and Louise Owen

• Jody Hoffman, Colville, has been a volunteer in the Stevens County 4-H program for 23 years. She currently serves as leader of the Stevens County Dog Program as well as leader of the Panorama 4-Paws 4-H Club. Thanks in large part to her help, five small animal shows and contests are offered in Stevens County each year.

• Dave and Louise Owen, Brush Prairie, became 4-H leaders in Clark County more than 24 years ago. They developed a 4-H poultry program that reached beyond the members of the Prairie Hatchers 4-H Club. With the Owens' encouragement, club members provided poultry project workshops in Washington, Idaho, and Montana. Dave, who died in 2002, became the leading poultry volunteer specialist in the state and trained other club leaders. He later served on a national 4-H Poultry Curriculum Development Committee. Louise still leads the Hatchers and is a member of the Clark County Leaders Association Executive Board.

Jo Simpson

Betty Witters

• Jo Simpson, Snohomish, has been a 4-H dog program leader in Snohomish County for 15 years. Her club regularly has more than 60 members. She was co-founder of the Canine Connections program at the Echo Glen Co-educational Juvenile Corrections Facility in 2000. There she guides youth to raise and train abandoned dogs which are then placed for adoption. The program has been featured on the KING-5 TV's Evening Magazine.

• Betty Witters, Clarkston, has been a 4-H leader in Asotin County for more than 35 years. She has been an organizational leader, clothing and textiles superintendent, and fashion review superintendent. She has volunteered at Demonstration Day many times and has helped organize other 4-H activities during her years as a leader.