Why Buy Local Farm Products?

Provides fresh, nutritious food.

Keeps small farms in business and supports the local economy.

Preserves farmland and open space in our communities.

Conserves resources - less fuel used in transportation and packaging.

Protects the environment through responsible land stewardship.

What is a CSA Farm?

Members pay the farmer at the beginning of the season for a "share" of the harvest.

Full shares cost $500-$600 a season, which works out to $22-$27 per week. Half-shares may be available.

Members receive their shares weekly.

Share content and amounts vary by the farm.

A season typically lasts 22 weeks, May-October.

Why a CSA Farm?

You know where your food comes from.

Farmers receive more of your food dollar through direct sales.

You can ask your farmer questions.

Consumers share the risk of production with farmers.

Ask Your CSA Farmer:

What is the cost & content of a weekly share?

Does your family need a full or half-share?

When & where will shares be available?

When does their season start and end?

Are there extra options such as eggs, flowers, or herbs? What do they cost?

Do they provide recipes?
