How is the Syrian refugee crisis affecting politics in central Europe? Some of the issues include the rise of xenophobia and right political parties, strained national budgets, and growing friction between member countries and the European Union.

Miro Haček is professor of political science, and is joined by researcher Simona Kukovič, both of the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia.