

Keeping it Civil:

A world map with a color gradient overlay representing temperature anomalies. The map shows a clear trend of warming, with the warmest colors (red and orange) concentrated in the Northern Hemisphere, particularly over land and in the Arctic region. The Southern Hemisphere shows more moderate warming, indicated by yellow and light orange colors. The text "Encouraging rational discussion of climate change" is superimposed over the map.

Encouraging rational discussion of climate change

Discussion of climate change provokes extreme reactions in people with differing views. How is it possible to have a rational conversation about such a controversial subject?

Alex Steffen is an award-winning author, speaker, and consultant. His newest book “Carbon Zero: Imagining Cities That Can Save the Planet” shows a new perspective on climate change and a future that isn't out of reach.
