

Gender, violence, and civil conflicts

Monday February 5 | 12 noon
Foley Speaker's Room | Bryan 308

How successful have international efforts been to prevent sexual and gender-based violence in conflicts? Professor Freedman will discuss ways in which the issue has been placed on the international agenda, and examine critiques of the framing of various initiatives and their applications.

Jane Freedman is professor of politics at Université de Paris 8. Her most recent book is Gender, Violence and Politics in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (Ashgate, 2016).
