The European Union is probably the region of the world where most practical policy experimentation has taken place in the field of environment and climate change and the EU emerged as a global leader in international climate negotiations.

Jürgen Salay is an expert on European climate policy with close to 20 years of professional experience in preparing, negotiating and implementing climate legislation on national and European Union level.