Pizza & Politics Series

Not enough ventilators?
The ethics of allocating health care in a pandemic

Tuesday April 7 | 11am
Watch it live on the Foley Institute YouTube channel (url: https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCTHBPsxJgslU2d92eIKc5tA/videos)

As the morbidity rate from COVID-19 grows, threatening to overwhelm hospitals and healthcare providers, how should we allocate limited resources? Who should make decisions if the demand for life-saving care outstrips existing supply, and what criteria should they use? Join us for a live video discussion with online Q&A.

William Kabasenche is professor of philosophy at Washington State University

Carlton Heine is professor of emergency medicine at the WSU Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine