The use of shame as a weapon in politics has a long history in the United States. But have we entered a new period of shamelessness? And what can be done to improve our political discourse?

Carolyn Long is an associate professor at WSU Vancouver’s School of Politics, Philosophy, and Public Affairs.