

Coffee & Politics

Border politics and the wall

Thursday April 26 | 12 noon
Foley Speaker's Room | 308 Bryan Hall

Fueled by a call to stop “rapists,” drug dealers, and other “bad hombres,” the Trump Administration has committed to a policy of heightened border security. The rhetorical turn in US policy is having seismic impact on international relations and on border communities in the Southwest, but it is it that different from previous administrations? Come join us for a discussion about recent executive branch efforts to deal with border security.

Dr. Richard Pineda is director of the Sam Donaldson Center for Communication Studies at the University of Texas, El Paso