

Students Serving on ESFCOM Committees and Workgroups
Final SEPAC Reviewed 1/14/19

For purposes of this document, ESFCOM Committees and Working Groups are committees/groups which are overseen by ESFCOM administrators, staff, or faculty in which student representation is desired. The criteria and procedures for the selection of students on these committees/groups and length of service are determined by the individual committees and/or its members according to ESFCOM Faculty Bylaws.

To serve on the committees students must be in good academic and professional standing; they may be asked by the Associate Dean for Student Affairs or Academic/Clinical Portfolio Coaches to explore the impact on serving on the committee while still being successful academically.

If a student has failed a course or is on academic probation, they may be ineligible to serve on committee(s) or workgroups. If the student returns to good academic standing, they will be eligible to serve on committees or workgroups through the process identified by the chair or head of a specific committee/working group for selecting student representatives.

Students are expected to uphold the professionalism code of conduct outlined in the student handbook. If a student has incident cards or notices of concern regarding unprofessional behavior, the Student Evaluation, Progress, and Awards Committee (SEPAC) may decide that a student must leave a committee(s) indefinitely. If a student is placed on academic probation, the student is ineligible to serve on ESFCOM committees while on probation. With successful remediation, the student may serve on future committees/groups.
