Blinding Criminal Convictions

The AMCAS application asks applicants to report certain criminal convictions. The following outlines the process in the admissions cycle during which the criminal record reported in AMCAS is blinded and unblinded:

1. Preliminary screening for applicants to receive the secondary application
 - The application management system automatically screens for requirements for the secondary application as outlined in the Medical Student Selection Policy. The AMCAS criminal background section is not screened in this automated process. Receiving a secondary application deems an applicant eligible to be considered for admission to the Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine.
2. Selection for the interview using AMCAS, secondary, and recommendation letters
 - The application management system blinds the AMCAS criminal background section when an applicant is being screened for an interview.
3. Multiple Mini Interview (MMI)
 - No aspect of the AMCAS application is provided to interviewers.
4. Admissions Committee review

Admissions Criminal Background Policy

- The full AMCAS application, secondary application, and MMI evaluations are available to reviewers who make recommendations to the Admissions Committee. At this point, the AMCAS criminal background section is unblinded.

Considering Criminal History in Offering Admission

All applicants who are selected for an interview are otherwise qualified for admission to the Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine. After applicants complete their MMIs, the Admissions Committee may consider criminal history in determining if an offer of admission should be made. If the Admissions Committee considers criminal history, it must determine whether or not there is a relationship between the applicant's criminal history and the College of Medicine MD program. To do so, the committee will consider:

1. The age of the applicant at the time any aspect of the applicant's criminal history occurred;
2. The time that has elapsed since any aspect of the applicant's criminal history occurred;
3. The nature of the criminal history, including but not limited to whether the applicant was convicted of a "serious violent offense" or a "sex offense" as those terms are defined in RCW 9.94A.030; and
4. Evidence of rehabilitation or good conduct produced by the applicant.

Considering Criminal History After an Offer of Admission

Upon conditional acceptance to the Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine, a formal criminal background check is facilitated by the AAMC through Certiphi Screening, Inc for all accepted applicants. The following outlines the process for reviewing discrepancies from what is reported on the Certiphi Screening, Inc. report and AMCAS, or if an applicant discloses a felony or misdemeanor crime for which they have been convicted after the date of their original AMCAS submission and before medical school matriculation.

1. The discrepancy or new disclosure is reviewed by the ADARI and the Chair of the Admissions Committee.
2. If it is found the applicant was not required to report the findings of the Certiphi criminal background check per AMCAS requirements, there is no action taken.
3. If it is found the applicant failed to report a felony or misdemeanor crime reported in the Certiphi criminal background check per AMCAS requirements or has a new conviction that meets the reporting requirements of AMCAS, the case will be brought before the Admissions Committee for discussion. The applicant will be provided an opportunity to provide a response to the discrepancy/new conviction which may occur in writing or in person. Consideration of the criminal history itself will follow the procedure above; however this does not prevent the Admissions Committee from making a determination based solely on an applicant's failure to properly report criminal history. Options presented will include upholding the offer of acceptance, rescinding the offer of acceptance, or another action such as waitlisting the applicant.
