The Harm Reduction Talking Circles (HaRTC) project is a collaboration between researchers, patients, traditional healers, and the Seattle Indian Health Board to integrate a harm-reduction approach with the Native tradition of the talking circle. In this webinar, the project co-leaders, Drs. Lonnie Nelson and Susan Collins, will discuss the project’s aims, development, and implementation.

Lonnie Nelson, PhD (Eastern band of Cherokee Indians), is a licensed psychologist and an Associate Professor in the College of Nursing at Washington State University. Dr. Nelson researches health disparities in American Indian and Alaska Native communities as a faculty member with Partnerships for Native Health, a component of the Initiative for Research and Education to Advance Community Health.

Susan Collins, PhD, Co-Leader of HaRTC, is a licensed clinical psychologist, Associate Professor, and Co-Director of the University of Washington’s Harm Reduction Research and Treatment Center at Harborview Medical Center.

This research is supported by the National Institute On Alcohol Abuse And Alcoholism under Award Number P60AA026112
