“Scientists Make Great Entrepreneurs: How to Move from the Lab to the Boardroom”

A business background is not required to be an entrepreneur. In fact, scientists have many of the critical skills required to start and build successful companies that can address the most complex problems of our day. Dr. Brittany Berry-Pusey will share her journey of licensing a technology from a university and building a successful company improving therapy options for patients with prostate cancer. She will discuss how to translate skills that make a successful scientist to skills that make a successful entrepreneur.
