

Where do I get Images and how can I use them?

Material on the Internet is NOT automatically in the public domain. Material online is available to look at and read—it is NOT automatically available for anyone to take and reuse.

With any image database and with any specific image, you must look for and read any fine print that will specify whether you can use the image, and, if you can use it, what other requirements you must follow, such as citing a source or photographer.
