We often think about houses for birds, but how about for bats? This book is a treasure of ideas for making bat houses, bird houses, habitat for butterflies and even toads!

The basic plan of each abode is based on research and experience of naturalists. They show you how to encourage wildlife even with no backyard.

They have a section that describes the food and habitat of owls, woodpeckers, chickadees, squirrels, turtles and much more wildlife. There are lists of tools, materials and supplies that are needed for construction of each habitat. There are tips for the best place to put them once you build them. You can even grow your own birdhouses!

Many pictures and articles make this book a great addition to your library.
