Communicating with students is a key part of being a teaching assistant. Communication is done primarily through Microsoft outlook, Blackboard, and in class.

Being an assistant is a great way to understand the organization skills it takes to run an operation of 85 individuals. Not only are these skills helpful in the educational environment, but they will have a great influence in future endeavors.

Having the opportunity to help students succeed in their college education is incredibly rewarding and inspiring. Being able to influence an individual in a positive way teaches you to be humble and kind to everyone you meet.

Time management is something that is extremely important in life, and being both a teaching assistant and a college student simultaneously has taught me exactly what it takes to succeed.
