Ag. Services Internship at Lamb Weston
Kennewick, WA
Summer 2021
Blake Doyle

Company Background:
Lamb Weston is the world second largest potato production companies, as well as being the number one largest in North America. The location I worked at grows the majority of the company’s potato crop, in the Columbia Basin.

My Responsibilities:
My main role this summer was working under one of the senior agronomists in the Kennewick location with the growth and development of new varieties of potatoes. This included doing weekly digs to collect data that will be used to analyze and compare the new variety to the standard variety that it is being grown with.

My Experience:
I learned a lot about the potato industry after working here not only this summer but the last 3 summers and has provided me with a ton of hands-on experience as well as learning a lot about farming that will benefit me substantially for the rest of my life in agriculture.
