Alone

English adaptation and music by Alexis Jackson
Original ASL poem by Daniel Durant

Soprano

Emp - ty vast - ness stretch - es flat be - fore me. The dark - ness can - not hide the sheets of

Alto

Emp - ty vast - ness stretch - es flat be - fore me. The dark - ness can - not hide the sheets of

Tenor

Emp - ty vast - ness stretch - es flat be - fore me. The dark - ness can - not hide the

Bass

Emp - ty vast - ness stretch - es flat be - fore me. The dark - ness can - not hide the

Rehearsal Piano

rain and thrash - ing winds.

© 2017 Alexis Bolos Jackson
My world falls from its frail suspension in space
And spin - ters, frag - ments, a chan - de - lier.

My world falls from space
And spin - ters, frag - ments, a chan - de - lier.

At lone. My world falls from space
And spin - ters, frag - ments, a chan - de - lier.

Alone
Alone

My eyes join the clouds in rain, abandon to the

Oh

I'll ne-ver know how you caught me on the edge of that a-ban-don; how your and sent it beating, spreading life through me; how you shifted the world and mended necessity restarted my heart

Since you showed me your heart, I am not alone.

As the sun, you graced me with your warmth. Since you showed me your heart, I am not alone.